

Single-Click Intelligence for Investigators

The digital world is an extension of the physical crime scene and with online content growing exponentially, the internet has become an integral source of information for today's investigations. Collecting insights online from publicly available information has the potential to support every investigation but it can be a demanding undertaking. Gathering data manually from open-source information can be time-consuming and complicated, and surfacing the actionable insights from this data can be equally challenging.

Cellebrite Smart Search provides investigators with a simple and intuitive way to solve these challenges. Investigators can perform quick and automated open-source searches on a desired identifier, collecting the most relevant information from publicly available data to help answer key questions, enrich evidence and generate new leads in an investigation. In a single click they can then generate a shareable intelligence report for stakeholders within minutes.

Simple as 1, 2, 3:

1

Use a single identifier to collect all the most relevant open-source information around a person of interest.

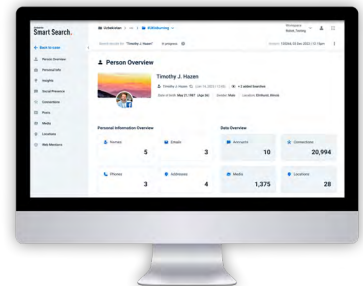

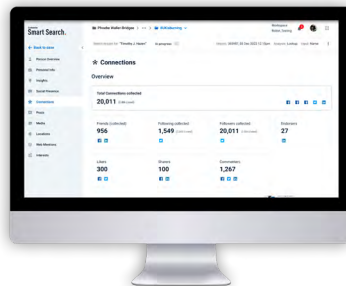

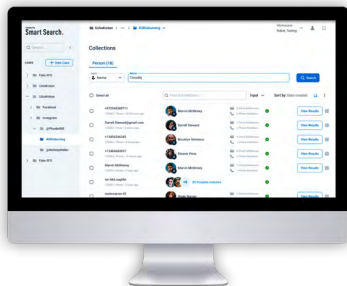

2

Surface behavioral patterns, friends, interests and social network activity from automatically created intuitive insights.

3

View and share results in a standardized, comprehensive report, and leverage the insights into investigative actions.
